Dear Alan,

Saturday, August 25th, 1990

This letter is the first communication I have ever attempted with a computer!

This wonderful Amstrad Laptop which you so kindly gave me for my son to take to college has been stolen by his parents. His mother, Anna, an old hand with various over-priced IBM models, has promised to educate me in the wonders of this new world - thereby erasing my guilty feelings for not doing this years ago!

As you might be able tell, I am having more than a little trouble with spacing, inability to find the cursor, etc!

At any rate, I hope you are having a good holiday and preparing yourself to supply the huge demand for Astra equipment this Autumn.

If I don't get better at this damned thing soon I'll start blaming you!

With best wishes and thanks,
Sincerely,

Rupert

P.S. This took me 90 minutes!
